I have a love/hate relationship with Ivan Illich's book "Deschooling Society" (and several other of his works). At the same time, and maybe for that reason, it is also one of the most read books in my collection. Before explaining my ambivalence, a brief summary of the book is due: The first two chapters attempt to outline the problem (s).

Illich focuses on both the terrible injustice to deny the individual his or her talents, and at the same time brings our attention to the great social loss by denying society the benefit of the genuine talents and skills.

Philosophy of Education -- Ivan Illich -- Deschooling ...

Ivan Dominic Illich was a Roman Catholic priest, theologian, philosopher, and social critic. His 1971 book Deschooling Society criticises modern society's institutional approach to education, an approach that allegedly constrains learning to narrow situations in a fairly short period of the human lifespan. His 1975 book Medical Nemesis, importing to the sociology of medicine the concept of medical harm, alleges that industrialised society widely impairs quality of life by overmedicalising life,

DESCHOOLING - Arvind Gupta

The Egyptian education system is trash, but that's not really something new. Abdel Nasser even made things worse by including higher education into the "free education" which led to an abundance of unqualified, unskilled graduates and eventually a sharp value decline of its degrees following a basic supply and demand economic model.
